DISKETTE

- Never wet or wash a Diskette. Dust it with a soft brush if necessary. Compressed air in a spray can may also be used to blow dust away.
- Heat is one of your Diskettes' worst enemies. Never store a Diskette in direct sunlight. Keep it away from excessive heat in general.
- Never BEND the Diskette. Handle your Diskettes with care, especially when loading or unloading them into the Disk Drive.
- Never attach paper clips to a Diskette.
- Never write on a Diskette or on the identification label of a Diskette with an erasable pencil or a ball-point pen. A fiber-tip pen is recommended for writing on the label.
- Magnetic Fields are another of your Diskettes' worst enemies. A Diskette exposed to a magnetic field will lose data. Keep Diskette away from magnets and electrical equipment (even telephones).
- Never touch the Diskette itself where it is exposed through the small "windows" in its protective envelope. It is not necessary to turn a Diskette in its envelope, the Disk Drive will take care of that.

"NEVER FORGETS."

NEVER FORGET.

Even though we guarantee your Elephant Flexible Disks to meet or beat all industry standards, we can't promise they'll forever retain their memory — unless you promise you'll forever do (or don't do) the following things:

1. DON'T TOUCH THE SHINY PARTS.

(The exposed "plastic" slits or dots that show through the black paper liner.) And don't touch them with anything. They're vulnerable to fingerprints, dust, coffee spills, cigarette ashes, sneezes, and maybe even dirty looks. The best way to keep things from touching them is to keep the disks inside their protective sleeves whenever you're not actually using them.

2. DON'T JAM THEM INTO THEIR SLOTS.

Ease them gently into their drives, so they don't bend, scratch, or otherwise become offended.

3. BEWARE OF MAGNETISM.

The disk's "memory" comes from a critical arrangement of the tiny magnetic particles on the disk's surface. Therefore, exposing the disk to close contact with any kind of magnetic field (which you'll find in and around television sets, electric motors that run fans, typewriters, air conditioners, etc., as well as the coils in most loudspeakers) can muck up the arrangement of particles — and your disk will end up either with amnesia or madness.

4. HANDLE LIKE GLASS.

Which means don't bend them, sit on them, drop things on them, use them to prop up table legs, etc. If you do so, they will spite you.

5. KEEP THEM COMFORTABLE.

Meaning between 50°F to 125° Fahrenheit (10° to 52° Celsius). Intense heat or cold can cause lost memory or weakened sensitivity. As an egregious generality, though, if the room's comfortable enough for you, it's more than comfortable enough for your disks.

6. IF IT'S IMPORTANT, COPY IT.

Let's face it: the information on the disk is usually worth a whole lot more than the price of the disk. (Just in man-hours alone to re-create the stored information, let alone in what it could cost you if something like your entire accounts receivable file should all of a sudden "forget.") So by all means, if the data is valuable, make a copy of the disk and store it someplace safe — like a deposit box or fireproof vault.

America's Premium Disk

From the World of syncom

Congratulations. Your wisdom in purchasing PLATINUM SERIES Diskettes will be handsomely repaid if you treat them with respect. Follow these simple rules and every data bit will be secure.

1. Store the diskette in this sleeve when it's not in your disk drive. Don't toss it on the table or lay it in an ashtray.

2. Don't fold, spindle or mutilate. The diskette will die an agonizing death. And, don't write on the jacket with a ball point pen.

3. Handle with respect and keep your fingers (and everything else) away from the shiny stuff in the open slot. A touch could mean instant data corruption.

4. Slide in the slot with care. Use a smooth easy motion and don't try to jam the diskette into the disk drive.

5. Don't boil or freeze. If the room is comfortable for you, your diskette will be happy. Store and use between 50°F to 125°F (10°C to 50°C).

6. Stay away from magnets if you have a diskette in your possession. The magnetic bits on the disk surface can go crazy or get permanently lost as a result of stray magnetic fields escaping from electric motors, permanent magnets, typewriters, air conditioners, etc.

TM

For proper diskette maintenance:

- ☐ Do not touch exposed surfaces.
- ☐ Keep away from magnetic fields.
- ☐ Do not bend or clip.
- ☐ Insert diskette in drive carefully.
- ☐ Replace in sleeve when not in use.
- ☐ Store between 50° and 125°F.
- ☐ Only use a felt tip pen on program label.

The notebook cover features a solid light beige top flap. The main body is a dark olive green, with a central band of a repeating geometric pattern. This pattern consists of three rows of interlocking shapes: the top row has upward-pointing triangles, the middle row has downward-pointing triangles, and the bottom row has trapezoidal shapes. The pattern is rendered in the same light beige color as the top flap. The bottom of the cover is a solid dark olive green.
